Ladakh face-off - Chinese media lauds Prime Minister of India Narendra Modi's speech

PM Modi had given the armed forces full freedom - he had "also appeared to downplay the clash downplay the clash". "Chinese observers said Modi is trying to respond to the nationalists and hardliners with tough talk, but he understands his country cannot have further conflict with China so he is also making an effort to cool tensions," the paper said. "Modi's remarks will be very helpful to ease the tensions because as the Prime Minister of India, he has removed the moral basis for hardliners to further accuse China," Lin Minwang, a professor at Fudan University's Center for South Asian Studies in Shanghai, told the paper. "When India is in conflict with Pakistan or other neighbours, nationalism might drive New Delhi to take actual operations, but when it comes to China, it is a different story."

Wei Dongxu, a military expert, said the PM's comments on the armed forces being allowed to take necessary steps was "a show of strength for domestic audiences to appease the Indian masses and boost the Indian troops' morale". On Union Minister Gen. V.K. Singh (retd.) saying China had lost at least 40 soldiers, the paper said he wanted "to placate the nationalists by making speculations and satisfy the hardliners."

CHENNAI : The Chinese media welcomed Prime Minister Narendra Modi's comments on the border, made at all-party meet, saying they would pave the way for de-escalation. The Communist Party-run Global Times quoted Mr. Modi as saying: "Nobody has intruded into our border, neither is anybody there now, nor have our posts been captured," a comment that was reported by several media outlets and shared on social media as well. The newspaper reported that while the PM had given the armed forces full freedom, he had "also appeared to

Yoga is "India's Great Gift to the World": President Ram Nath Kovind

He appealed to all countrymen to do yoga & meditation at home regularly to keep fit and stay healthy," a tweet on his official handle read. President Donald Trump Says China deal 'intact' hours after aide declares it 'over'

A trade deal worth $200 billion between China and the United States is "fully intact,"

WASHINGTON: A trade deal worth $200 billion between China and the United States is "fully intact," President Donald Trump said, just hours after his senior trade adviser rattled markets by saying the pact was "over." Trump waded in on Twitter to reassure markets that the agreement between the world's two largest economies — which took almost two years of wrangling - was still in play.

Earlier when asked about the trade agreement, White House trade adviser Peter Navarro told

"it's over." Navarro, an outspoken China critic and director of trade and manufacturing policy at the White House, said the "turning point" had been in January when the U.S. had learned about the coronavirus only "minutes after wheels up," once a Chinese delegation had left Washington, he said, following the signing of the first part of the agreement. The adviser's comments injected a strong dose of volatility into global markets with currency and futures markets dipping and Asia Pacific stocks falling into negative territory, before recovering after Navarro issued a statement that his comments had "been taken wildly out of context." And that the trade deal "continues in place," walking back his earlier remarks. "They had nothing at all to do with the Phase I trade deal, which continues in place. I was simply speaking to the lack of trust we now have of the Chinese Communist Party, after they lied about the origins of the China virus and foisted a pandemic upon the world," he said.

International Olympic Committee joins forces with WHO and the United Nations to fight COVID-19

GENEVA: On Olympic Day, the International Olympic Committee and WHO together with the United Nations launch a partnership to encourage individuals and communities around the world to be #HEALTHYTogether. The three partners and Olympic athletes will spotlight the global collaboration needed to stay healthy and reduce the spread and impact of COVID-19. Olympic athletes will help deliver important public health information, to inspire people to adopt or continue behaviours that will curtail the pandemic and provide information that promotes physical and mental health. The partnership kicks off with Olympians around the world showcasing various exercises to stay healthy during this time. A WHO survey showed that many people who had severe COVID-19 disease were already living with or at risk for noncommunicable diseases (NCDs). The results emphasize the importance of maintaining a healthy lifestyle including being physically active, having a healthy diet, and avoiding tobacco and alcohol. "We are pleased to partner with the International Olympic Committee to spread important health messages that will save lives. Olympians will help us advocate for healthier populations to ensure that people are as resilient as our health systems must be to fight COVID-19," said Dr Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, Director-General, WHO. Over the past six months, the COVID-19 pandemic has impacted every corner of the globe and every aspect of people's lives. The world is looking for global institutions to work together and for leaders to deliver reliable, credible information from sources they trust.
